First and foremost, I would like to thank my advisor, Prof. John Canny, who wanted me to pursue research that combined my interest in performing arts with computer science. I'm grateful to Prof. James Landay who pushed and pushed me to believe in my work and make it better and wouldn't let me slack off. I'm indebted to my outside committee member, Prof. John McWhorter who was there when I needed him. My good friend Erin Dare was my gesture model for my research, and helped design the avatar gesture movements. A number of faculty in computer science have inspired me and supported me, especially Robert Wilensky, David Forsythe, Marti Hearst and David Culler. Professor Gene Lawler has passed on already, but he helped get me into the program and I hold his memory dear. Thank you, wherever you are. Sheila Humphreys, thank you, you've been a great mentor through the years. The dedicated staff in the department smoothed out the ride. Thank you Jane Doyle, Winnie Wang, Kathryn Crabtree, Peggy Lau, Kate Riley, Mary Byrnes, Carlos Andrade, Mark Kraitchman, Rob McNicholas...I know I'm forgetting names, but I'm so grateful for your help and kindness, all of you. It's like going back in geologic time, remembering all the people who have supported me throughout the years. I'll start digging through the strata. The GUIR people have been great colleagues, especially Scott Klemmer, Ame Elliot, Dan Glaser, Mark Newman, Miriam Walker, Sara Waterson, James Lin and Jason Hong. My office mates stretch through all the layers and helped me in so many ways. Thanks for all the thoughtful discussions, technical and otherwise: Mikko K., Dan Reznik, Yan Zhuang, Brian Mirtich, David Parsons, Eric Paulos, Ioannis Emiris, and especially

Ashu Rege. Good luck to the new guys: Thomas Duan and Jeremy Risner. My dissertation writing group helped immensely with my writing: Blanca Gordo, Jeffrey Ow, Lynn Horiuchi and Ellen Sacco-Fernandez. To The Club: We cleared all the hurdles! I couldn't have done it without you. Thanks for being there, Maryann Simmons and Jeffrey Forbes. Digging deeper and deeper. The students are the best thing about this department. It's made things so much more bearable. Some have become loyal friends. Thanks for being so, so, so supportive, Diane Hernek, Kim Keeton, Mike Schiff, Nina Amenta, and others I'm sure I'm forgetting. Still digging. The Haste Street Players dragged me away from research and into musical theatre. Thanks for making grad school fun: Dan Jurafsky, Erin Dare, Chris Walton, Eric Enderton, Beth Multer and all the rest. There are still more layers. Special thanks to Becky Gross, my loving roomie. I owe a large part of my success to the Reentry program. You did a great service. Carla Trujillo has helped out since I was a reentry student and on through til the end. My fellow Reentry students were great, too: Ginger Ogle and Drew Roselli, it makes me smile to think about you. My friends were a huge support all the way. Helen Pappas, you were there from the very beginning; thank you for your patience. Liz and Robin Hsiao-Wecksler, I'm so glad you passed through Berkeley. Have I hit bedrock yet? It's my family. My dad told me I would get a Ph.D. when I was eleven. I couldn't believe anyone would want to stay in school that long. Some things are worth sticking it out for. I hope you're proud of me wherever you are. This dissertation is dedicated to you. My family is my greatest strength. I'm so glad you have to keep me. Thanks for all the prayers and encouragement, Mom. No more digging. Mark Mohrmann has been a patient, loving, (did I mention patient?) presence in my life. Thank you, my love, for believing.
