CUR Decompositions with Random Sampling

Ming Gu, UC Berkeley

April 3, 2013

Given a (Semi-) Positive Definite matrix $A$, we consider the problem of computing its low-rank CUR approximations by uniformly sampling its columns randomly. We show that for matrices with low coherence (a concept to be defined at the talk), random sampling produces rank-revealing CUR approximations that are within a constant factor from optimal.